EMMETSBURG, Iowa (AP) - Authorities have filed terrorism and other charges against a 55-year-old man accused of firing a bullet that struck a crop-dusting plane in northern Iowa.

Online court records say John Metzger, of Whittemore, also is charged with stalking with a weapon, intimidation with a dangerous weapon and going armed with intent. His attorney didn't immediately return a call Wednesday from The Associated Press, seeking comment on the allegations.

The Palo Alto County Sheriff's Office says the plane owned by Steier AG Aviation was hit in a wing flap while spraying a field in Fairfield Township on July 31. The plane was landed safely at Steier's landing strip in Whittemore. The pilot, whose name hasn't been released, wasn't injured.
